1Q) Explain the nature and scope of business economics
(or) Subject matter of economics?

Ans:- Business Economics is also called as ~~Managerial~~ economics. It is an application of economic theory and business problem. It is been defend by different authors in different ways.

- M.C. Nair - As per him, "Business Economics consists of use of economic modes of thought to analyze the business problem."

I Nature of business economics :-

1) It is micro in nature :- It can study mainly at the level of business firm like optimum level of allocation of resources, raw materials and other resources in order to promote, the business activities and it can also tells price mechanism and marketing mechanisation knowledge.

2) It is macro in nature :- It relates to national income, trade cycle, inflation and economic policies of govt which can influence the trade firms to produce the proper trade, practices and to avoid losses of business. It also states the necessary remediate measures.

3) It is pragmatic in nature :- Business Economic is pragmatic in nature. It concern economic theory a more application oriented. It can try to solve the managerial problems in day-to-day functioning of a business.

4) Profit management :- The main aim of business firm is to make maximum profit. The profit is derived from the total revenue of the firm subtracting with total cost of business ($TR - TC$). The remaining balance shows a profit of the business based on this profit, we can know profit, abnormal profits and breakeven even point etc. in the profit management branch.

5) Capital management :- Capital management is most complex problem. It implies planning and control of capital expenditure. The main topic under capital management (or) cost of capital rate of return and selection of project etc are determined.

2.Q) Explain the modern scope of business economics and its importance?

Ans:- The modern scope of economics initially classified into two parts studied by Prof. Ragnar Frisch (Ranger) in the year of 1933. They are

- (i) Micro Economics.
- (ii) Macro Economics.

I Micro Economics (Price theory) :-

Micro Economics was proposed by classical economics as per classicals, micro means small (or) a smallest among the small part of the economics unit study (or) study of individual units of economy is known as micro economics.

b) Social Welfare:- Based on micro economics, to improve the living condition of the human beings and nature of market terms and conditions can be determined.

II Macro Economics:-

It is been proposed by J.M. Keynes through his written book of "The General theory of employment, money and interest" from this book, he has delivered the subject matter of macro-economics, therefore, it is also called as income and employment theory.

As per Keynes, "macro means big (or) large (or) which studies about aggregate unit of economy is called as macro economics.

Example:- National income, General price level, etc
The importance of macro economics is illustrated here under:-

1) It helps to understand the economy:-

By the study of macro economics an individual economic condition, working system of the entire economy, their economic problem related to the behaviour and total employment improvement measurement can be illustrated.

2) General Employment:- By the study of macro economics we can know the entire economics, general unemployment, causes and its necessary measures can be derived for promoting the employment faculty.

In the above diagram, on Y-axis we are showing total and marginal utility of apples. On X-axis no. of apples units. The left to right upward is the total utility curve (TUC) and the left to right downward is the marginal utility curve (MUC). As you going to consume more than one quantity of apple the TU will be occur point to right upward direction, but at the point of M it will be maximum. Later, it diminishes - left to right down. The MU also so it will be occur left to right downfall. ~~The~~ but at the point of M, it will be intersected at ~~the~~ OX-axis.

Later the MU will go below OX-axis which shows a negative utility of satisfaction. A rational consumer never extend more than ON level of unit. Then only he can derive a positive return of satisfaction.

Exemptions:-

1) Hobbies:- In case of collecting stamps and coins, if they are collecting different kinds of stamps and coins then the satisfaction will be extended otherwise he will get monotonous, i.e., a sense of decreasing satisfaction.

2) Miser:- In case of miser attitude, if their earning income level increases consequently their satisfaction also gets extended.

3) Dorenker:- In case of dorenker, if he is going to take more no. of pegs of wine, consequently his satisfaction also extends. If he continues to take more than he gets dissatisfaction. Then he gets vomiting.

Importance:-

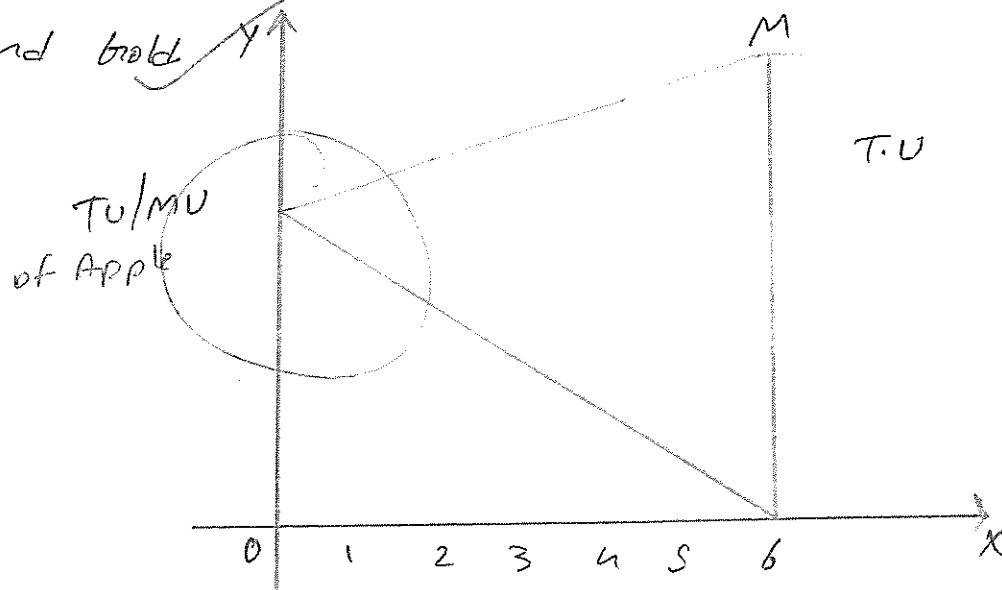

→ Useful to traders and business people:-

Based on DMU theory, traders can determine various goods and services prices.

→ Law of Demand:- Based on DMU, the law of demand theory was developed by Marshall.

⇒ Value and exchange power:- Based on this theory, the various goods and services value and exchange power can be determined.

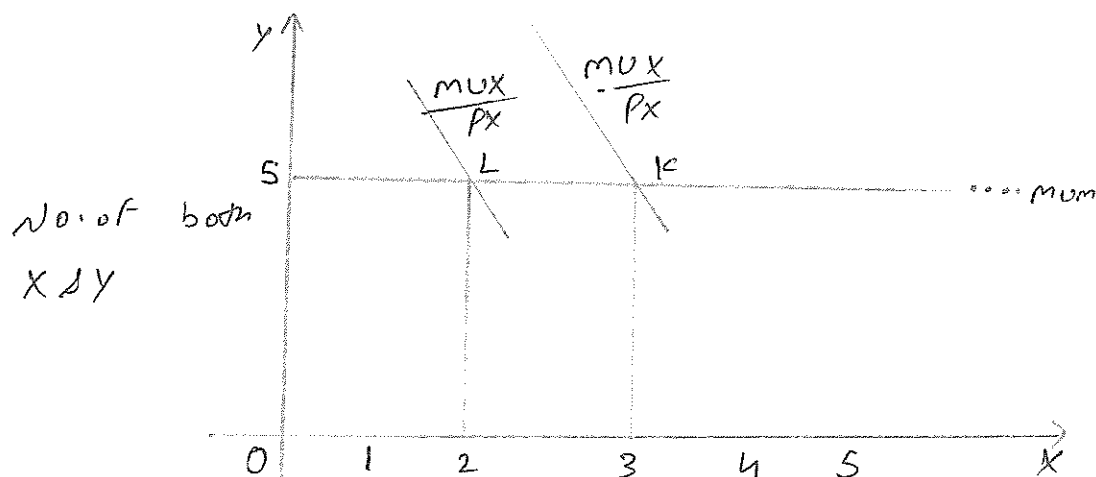

Ex: Water and gold

No other combination can give this level of satisfaction and the consumer will be in equilibrium subject to the satisfaction of following condition that only the consumer will be in equilibrium. Based on above schedule information we can illustrate here under diagram

$$CE = \frac{MU_X}{P_X} = \frac{MU_Y}{P_Y} = \text{some}$$

In the above diagram on Y-axis marginal utility of both X & Y axis on Y-axis rupees spends on commodity and horizontal shows the marginal utility of money which remains constant and left to right downwards are marginal utility of Y & X curve. Similarly the MU_X curve intersected with MUM line at the point of K from that point if we extend a vertical line towards X axis which is touching on no. 3 it means that 3 rupees spent on X unit and both goods & services additional utility becomes equal to 15 units. In order to derive maximum amount of satisfaction and the consumer will be in equilibrium position.

Importance of the law:-

1) It is useful to the consumer:-

Based on this law all individual consumer can spend low expenditure on several units. In order to derive maximum amount of satisfaction.

2) It is useful to producer:-

Based on this law the producer can allocate various factors & exchange low additional productive factor for more additional production will become equal.

3) Exchange System:-

Based on this law the various goods & services are being exchange in suitable proportion.

4) It is useful to the government:-

The govt also with help of this law they can spend low budget on various welfare programmes in order to derive maximum welfare of the society.

S.Q) Explain the law of demand, what are the causes negative slope of demand curve?

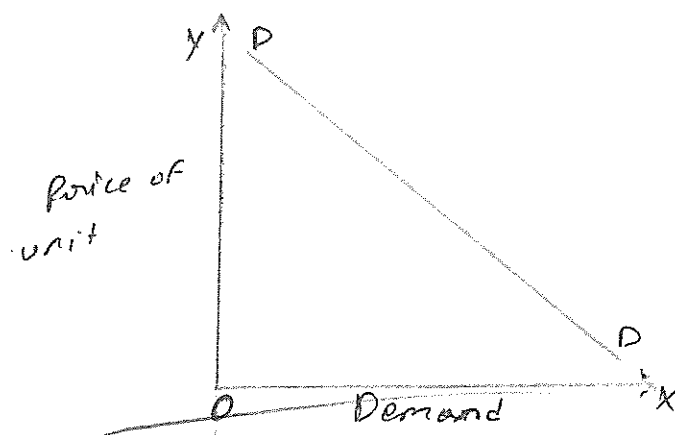

Ans:- Introduction:- In ordinary language demand means desirable but in economic terms demand is dependent upon a necessary two important conditions these are:

- 1) Desirable
- 2) Ability to purchase than only the unit

Price of Commodity	Quantity of Demand
1-00RS	5
2-00RS	4
3-00RS	3
4-00RS	2
5-00RS	1

In the above table if the price is 1 Rupee the unit demand will be 5. If the price is increase at 2 rupee the unit demand will be decreases at 4 unit. If the price is going on increase consequently the unit demand will be decreases. There is an inverse relation b/w price of commodity and it's quantity of demand.

Based on these schedule we can illustrate here under demand diagram

SPQ

In the above diagram on y-axis we are showing Price of unit and x-axis is quantity of demand. If the price is increase the unit demand will be decrease like vice-versa due to an inverse relation b/w the price of commodity and its quantity of demand. The DD demand will occur from left to right downward flow.
